Editorial note

The phrase "Go light your world" sounds seemingly simple but is meaningfully poignant. Each year the college sends out students who are equipped with knowledge and skills ready for the future. It is up to each individual to use whatever they have to be an asset to the society / world they live in.

The Editorial team would like to thank all the contributors for their valuable articles without which this issue would be bland. The team also wishes all the outgoing students the very best in life.

As you step outside the college premises, may you find the path to your destiny for now is the time for you all to show your worth and Go light your world!

May the reading of this issue be filled with relaxation, mirth and a little bit of nostalgia.

OUR JOURNEY

- Mr. Vemhazo. B.A 6th Sem (gen)

After so many discussions and hardwork, B.A 6th semester General students decided to visit four places i.e Delhi, Manali, Shimla and Chandigarh. We set out for tour with seventeen members under the guidance of the C.R and a travel agency. On seventeenth of December we moved out from Dimapur. The train journey was terrible yet it was enjoyable because of some idiot friends (entertainers).

There were many awkward situations that occurred during our trip and none were forgotten. If it wasn't captured on camera, it is captured in our memory.

At first I felt like it was going to take years and years of journeying travelling in a train but in the end I realized that it was a time well spent with friends in the shortest duration.

I am not a great adventurer nor an explorer but I felt enlightened with my friends, visiting auspicious places. I would like to highlight some experiences of our tour:

DELHI: We reached Delhi on nineteenth December and spent two nights and one day. There were funny incidents, some of my friends lost their way during shopping. We visited the India Gate, Lotus Temple and Qutab Minar.

MANALI: Everyone of us was excited with the idea of seeing and laying our hands on the snow. It turned out surprisingly to everyone that it was the best site of all places that we visited.

CHANDIGARH: At first I thought we will be staying in Chandigarh but there, we just had our lunch and moved on to the next destination.

SHIMLA: We spent one night and one day in Shimla which is a very cold place and so we couldn't visit some places. There were some unavoidable situations but we were able to visit snowpoint and celebrate Christmas in Shimla.

Some journeys can never be forgotten. It reverberates in our mind again and again.

Life is a continuous journey. Some journeys are short and some long. Some journeys are sweet and pleasant while some are sour. Some journeys are too good to be erased by the sands of time. I had one such experience. The memory of "the journey" continues to flicker on in my mind every day.

I'm grateful to you for sharing your experience, expertise and wisdom in the hardest class. I thank you from the bottom of my heart. May God bless you with long and happy life!

FROM STRANGERS TO FAMILY- Ms. Sweety Singh B.Com 6th Sem

Didn't we desperately wait for release from the sentence of three years?

There will be no more paper shots on our heads from the last bench Archers.

There will be no more witch like laughter which almost made the whole college tremble.

There will be no more standing in Dr. Pandey's period for leave note, no more writing the whole universe's notes in Dr. Singh's period, no more of those motherly scolding from Dr. Avelle and no more of those counseling from Sir Kezha to study 6 hours a day.

Dear Lecturers,

From your loving arm we leave now,

Wouldn't you forgive us for disobedience, mischievousness and unmanageability?

We, now promise to obey those teachings and moral lessons for the rest of our life.

Thank you for shaping this little mind, loving Lecturers.

And a thank you to all my mates for the wonderful times.

From being “strangers” to “family” that's how it has ended.

WORDS OF GRATITUDE -Mr. Wulo Akami, B.A 6th sem (Eng)

When I first joined the college my height was 5.7(ft), and weight 57(kgs). Today, I'm still with 57(kgs) and just 5.7(ft), so I don't feel any different in my physical stature, unlike my friend Twinto whose belly is seen first, while entering the classroom rather than his leg or head after reaching 6th semester. Some are leaving with broken hearts, some found love and some like me are leaving with just admirers.

One of the best experiences for me in Baptist College was the "Literature Fest" where I was given the opportunity to exhibit and sell my artworks. It is an event where you learn something not only through listening but also visual sight. I wish to be a part of every edition even in the years to come and I believe it will be beneficial for everyone to attend and be inspired.

I am just a student who has survived with just pass marks throughout the past semesters. I want to thank each and every of my lecturers who taught me from the 1st semester to the 6th semester for helping me to prepare for my last exam of B.A course. You helped me not only in academic performance but I was encouraged and inspired by them in so many ways especially my English lecturers who brought out the best version of myself. Words are not enough to thank my classmates, each of them equally contributed one way or the other in my life and I feel so blessed spending three years together with them as family.

I should say I made the right choice choosing Baptist College and I'm honored and humbled in so many ways, today I'm leaving with pride for my college. There is no 'ism' in our college and the election system is the best example for all the other colleges or institutions to follow. The best feeling is that there is no difference between seniors and juniors, all are treated as one and enjoys rights equally. I believe our juniors will carry on with all these good practices even in the future and make our college a role model for everyone.

The Beautiful THREE Years' Journey- Kuku*-Ms. Livi, B.Com 6th sem*

You are the Pawns in the First year
 You are Ministers in the Second Year
 You become the King of the Campus in the Final year!
 The College becomes a place where,
 Getting 75% ATTENDANCE
 Is harder than passing the Final exams
 Comes to college everyday;
 Attendance crawls from 72% to 72.75%
 Miss a day of college;
 Attendance bounces from 78% to 54% real quick.

The THREE years journey that seemed Long but rather Short has come to an End!
 The time comes for all those- 'Once a stranger'
 Now part ways as 'Family, Beloved & Friends'.
 College Farewell..... Sad Faces...!!
 "We'll stay in touch," said everyone
 But the WhatsApp group will become the only Reunion Spot.

New Resolutions*-Mr. Pelelhoutuo, B.A 2nd Sem*

There are things I shouldn't do,
 Things that offer no benefit,
 In this weary life of mine to,
 Live a life happy and fit.

There are times I set,
 New resolutions for things I should do,
 To enjoy the benefits of life I should get,
 In this little hue of time.

Oh! But these resolutions I could not keep,
 For the bad things tempt,
 Sweetly like that of a sound beep,
 And I feel like a camper without a tent.

As I break these new resolutions of mine,
 I begin to feel a sense of guilt,
 But next time, I shall give a calm thought,
 And newer and better resolutions I shall build.

Hands*- Mr. Tsaroba Y. Sangtam, B.A 2nd Sem*

They talked without a sound
 Shaping stories in the air.
 I tried to look away
 It's not polite to stare

But never had I seen four hands
 Hovering like butterflies
 Never had I seen two people
 Listening with just their eyes.

From pinky tip
 to chubby thumb
 My two strong hands
 at once feel dumb.

I wished something
 I knew I shouldn't
 I can hear
 I wish I couldn't

Memories*- Mr. Apongba Jamir, B.A 2nd Sem (Gen)*

We met on the shore of the blue lake,
 Weeping willows looked down on us.
 We were blooming beautifully
 Reflecting colorful moments, both of us!
 Dancing, laughing, happiness all along.

Memories of our last spring together.
 Remains vibrant in my mind.
 Alas, winter has arrived so hastily!
 Soon you and I will wither away
 Farewell to thee but not our fondest memories.

Love- Mr. Rikhum, B.A 2nd Sem

You're painted
 In the picture
 Hanging in my head
 And every time I dream
 I get to meet you again
 I don't wanna wake up
 For reality to set
 So I just keep my eyes closed
 And I fall in love again

POSITIVE THINKING

- Ms. Rhondeno Ngullie, B.A 6th sem (Eng)

Positive thinking is affirmative thinking. It is a way of looking at our problems and trying to solve them through constructive action. It helps us build our weaknesses. It also helps us to focus on good things in life and serve as a magnet, attracting everything good around us and to strengthen our self confidence.

Each of us is endowed with myriads of talents and capabilities. Fortunately some of us recognize earlier and start running after them but for some it takes something to realize what they have been chiefly interested in what they are capable of.

Once this realization has dawned, what's required is concentrated effort and positive thinking. The next important factor is time. We must learn to master time but not let time master us. The other hurdle that stands between us and positive thinking is fear and worry. We must try to erase these two negative aspects and cultivate self-reliance, love, enthusiasm and sense of humor.

To help achieve all the above, we must practice the art of meditation; keep telling yourself that we are endowed with the power to accomplish everything we desire.

Lastly, we must also remember that only positive mental attitude can translate our wish into action and a new successful "YOU" and "I" will emerge.
